The Dude's Lament.

Zwends, pway do not think me wude,
Fca I'm quite misunderstood,
An' I'm called by all "The Dude"
Wich an' ware!"

An' the witalis make me food
For their wit, bof bad and good,
Just—ah—as they win the mood
'Tisn't fair!

Say my paunts would fit a gun,
An' make oh! such awful fun
Of the way I walk an' wan
On the atweet;

Call my dahling mustache dun,
An' upon my hat they pun,
An' call it a breakfast bun,
What a treat!

An' they make spawt of my cane
Till I hardly can refrain
Lawfin' out, in spite of pain
In my bweast;

They've of pity not a gwaing,
Say I came down wif the wain,
Weally! I shall go insane
Of unwest.

An' they say my arms aw bent
Like a boomewang, what's sent
Fwom a howwid heathen's tent,
At the foe.

Come now, fellahs of the pweas,
Pway don't lay such awful swess
On the way I act an' dwess.
Pway don't lawf!

For I'm hawf boy, I confess,
An' hawf girley, too, I guess—
As I'm in a howwid mess,
Pway, come off!

THE ASSASSIN'S BONES.

In the small room in the upper story in the Army Medical Museum, formerly Ford's Theater, in this city, are two wooden trays similar to those used by housekeepers for kneading dough, but in this instance the contents of the trays are of a more ghastly description, being the highly polished bones of the assassin Guiteau.

While inspecting these remains of the notorious criminal, the attention of your correspondent was directed to the extraordinary whiteness of the bones and their resemblance to polished ivory. No attempt has been made to articulate the skeleton, and the trays bear no number by which they could be distinguished from similar receptacles in the museum. "Look in that box over there if you want to see an interesting skull," said the guide pointing to a deep hat box on a small table strewn with bones and tools used by anatomists. There was a highly polished skull in the box, and on the right side was the deflection which the insanity experts wrangled about during the trial. The attention of the guide was drawn to the fact, but he laughed at the idea of its being an indication of insanity. "A perfectly symmetrical head," said he, "would be as rare as a white blackbird. Out of 1,800 skulls examined at the museum during the dispute about Guiteau's head, only one was found perfect, and that is now down stairs in the collection of the museum." It was ascertained that in preparing the bones of the dead murderer more than usual care had been taken to preserve them, and consequently the skeleton, when mounted, will be the best in the collections of the museum. It has been deemed advisable for prudential reasons to keep the bones in a secret place until they can be exhibited to visitors, but all talk about their identity having been lost is bosh. One of the first questions of the tourist doing the museum is to be shown Guiteau's skeleton, and in order to escape being bored the surgeon in charge has declined to ascertain its location in the building. The process by which the bones were treated insures their perpetuation for an indefinite period, and Anatomist E. F. Schofield gave his personal attention to the work. Not a bone has been lost, and as before stated when articulated, the skeleton will be the best in the museum. The plaster cast of Guiteau's head gives a good idea of the appearance of his skull, as the identification is very perceptible in the facsimile. The coffin in which the remains of the assassin were removed from the jail three days after burial is retained at the museum, but the outer box is still in the ground at the jail. A trusted official has the key of the room in which the bones are kept, and no one is allowed to range at will in this apartment.

The Religious Card Player.

A private soldier by the name of Richard Lee was taken before the magistrate of Glasgow, Scotland, for playing cards during divine service. The account of it is thus given in an English journal: A sergeant commanded the soldiers at the church, and when the person had read the prayers he took the text. Those who had bibles took them out; but this soldier had neither bible nor common prayer book and, pulling out a pack of cards, he spread them before him. He first looked at one and then at the other. The sergeant of the company saw him and said: "Richard, put up the cards; this is no place for them."

"Never mind that," said Richard. When the service was over the constable took Richard prisoner and brought him before the mayor.

"Well," said the mayor, "what have you brought the soldier here for?"

"For plying cards in church."

"Well, soldier, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Much, Sir, I hope. 'Very good; if not, I will punish you severely.'"

"I have been," said the soldier, "about six weeks on the march. I have neither Bible nor common prayer book; I have nothing but a pack of cards, and I hope to satisfy your worship of the purity of my intention." Then spreading the cards before the mayor, he began with the ace. "When I see the ace it reminds me there is but one God; when I see the deuce, it reminds me of the Father and Son, when I see the three, it reminds me of the Father Son and Holy Ghost; when I see the four, it reminds me of the four evangelists that preached, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; when I see the five it reminds me of the five wise virgins that trimmed their lamps; there were five, five were wise and five were foolish, and were shut out; when I see the six, it reminds me that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth; when I see the seven, it reminds me that on the seventh day the Lord rested from the great work he had done and hallowed it; when I see the eight, it reminds me of the eight righteous person who were saved when God destroyed the earth, viz: Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives; when I see the nine, it reminds me of the nine lepers, who were cleansed by our Savior. There were nine out of ten that never returned thank; when I see the ten, it reminds me of the ten commandments that God handed down to Moses on the tables of stone; when I see the King, it reminds me of the great King of Heaven, which is God Almighty; when I see the queen, it reminds me of the queen of Sheba, who visited Solomon, for she was as wise a woman as he was a man. She brought with her fifty boys and fifty girls, all dressed in boys' apparel, for King Solomon to tell which were boys and which were girls. The King sent for water for them to wash. The girls washed to the elbows, the boys to the wrists, so King Solomon told by that."

"Well," said the Mayor, "you have described all the cards in the pack except one."

"What is that?"

"The knave," said the Mayor. "I will give your honor a description of that, too, if you will not get angry."

"I will not," said the Mayor, "if you do not term me to be the knave."

"The greatest knave I know of is the constable who brought me here."

"I do not know," said the Mayor, "whether he is the greatest knave, but I know he is the greatest fool."

"When I count how many spots there are in a pack of cards, I find 365—as many as there are days in the year; when I count the number of cards in the pack, I find 52—the number of weeks in a year; I find there are 12 picture cards in the pack—the number of months in the year, and on counting the tricks, I find 13—the number of weeks in a quarter. So you see a pack of cards serves for a Bible, an almanac and common prayer book."

Another hoop-snake has been discovered in this state, but strange to say, the gentleman who saw it did not adhere to the conventional form. "And you say that the snake did not roll after you," said a man when the hoop-snake man had concluded his recital.

"No, he did not roll after me."

"You didn't jump behind a tree, then, just as the snake struck at you?"

"No, sir."

"And the leaves on the tree did not wither and die within two hours?"

"No."

"My friend, here is a twenty dollar gold piece. A man who can defy temptation, as you have done, and stick to the truth, should be rewarded."

The San Francisco Post, speaking about the abandonment of Fort Yuma, says: So Fort Yuma has been abandoned! To those who have read the writings of rare John Phenix (Lieut. Derby) this news will bring some sad recollections. Derby was stationed at Fort Yuma in the fifties, and it was from thence emanated those magnificent sentinels of the school of American humor of which Orpheus C. Kerr, Artemus Ward and Mark Twain were disciples. Derby's little hit at the climate of Fort Yuma is remembered and laughed at to this day. Yuma is situated on the Colorado river, on the edge of a sandy plain, and in the summer the heat is of terrible intensity. The story was that two soldiers died at Yuma and went to h—[the rest of the story is suppressed out of charity to our readers. If, however, any of our readers have not heard the story they can hear of something to their advantage by addressing this office. — Ed. SENTINEL.] There is also interest attaching to Fort Yuma, from the fact that it was the resting place for the California immigration via the southern route in the early days, and many a rich and comfortable Californian looks back to Yuma with recollections of how well his bacon and frying pan bread tasted at that place, while resting on his weary journey across the plains. Yuma was then an outpost of civilization, but railroads and mines, and the development of the country have rendered a tort and garrison unnecessary, and old Fort Yuma will soon be a thing of the past; but the town of Yuma will exist and flourish for, lo, these many years.
